Alderman Colley-Urquhart wants to hear from you on the issue of secondary suites
_QR77 Newsroom
1/12/2011

A Calgary alderman has set up a survey on the controversial issue of secondary suites. Diane Colley-Urquhart says a lot of people are concerned about what she calls the Mayor's push to allow suites everywhere in the city. The Ward 13 alderman says there was a lot of angst when she was door knocking during the election campaign. Colley-Urquhart says people are concerned about increased traffic and the transient nature of the suites. A survey on her website is looking for feedback. She wonders if opportunities already exist where suites are currently allowed rather than moving toward a blanket policy on the matter. Colley-Urquhart says the survey will be up on her website until the end of February.
