Police tape off scene of young woman's death

Northeast gets bad rap

A city alderman says northeast Calgary is getting a bad rap because of the recent spate of violence in that part of the city.

In the last ten days there have been two homicides in the northeast part of the city.

On August 3rd, 24-year-old Sarah Nicole Rae was found dead in a home in the 6100 block of 4th St. N.E.

Then on Saturday a man was shot and killed in broad daylight, as he was going to visit some friends on Marcombe Way N.E.

Witnesses say they saw two men wearing masks get out of a car, shoot the man and drive away.

Alderman Dianne Colley-Urquhart says the people committing these crimes don't have geographic boundaries.

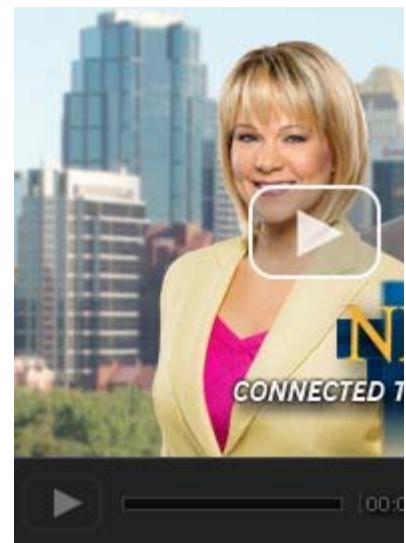

"Its not designated just to northeast Calgary or the beltline or even Calgary," says Colly-Urquhart, "that's why the province has taken an interest in funding more police officers."

Police are going to use search and rescue volunteers to do another search of the area around where Sarah Nicole Rae was killed to look for a murder weapon and other evidence that might lead to the killer.
